

Early Journal Content on JSTOR, Free to Anyone in the World

This article is one of nearly 500,000 scholarly works digitized and made freely available to everyone in the world by JSTOR.

Known as the Early Journal Content, this set of works include research articles, news, letters, and other writings published in more than 200 of the oldest leading academic journals. The works date from the mid-seventeenth to the early twentieth centuries.

We encourage people to read and share the Early Journal Content openly and to tell others that this resource exists. People may post this content online or redistribute in any way for non-commercial purposes.

Read more about Early Journal Content at <http://about.jstor.org/participate-jstor/individuals/early-journal-content>.

JSTOR is a digital library of academic journals, books, and primary source objects. JSTOR helps people discover, use, and build upon a wide range of content through a powerful research and teaching platform, and preserves this content for future generations. JSTOR is part of ITHAKA, a not-for-profit organization that also includes Ithaka S+R and Portico. For more information about JSTOR, please contact support@jstor.org.

Secretary's Report.

So many things have occurred in the past year to hinder the progress of the Chapter, that a very favorable report can hardly be expected. Outside of the three reports on the Owls, the Warblers, and the Nesting of the Crow, very little Ornithological work has been done. The Owl report was published in "Popular Science News," occupying about two pages, and work on the other reports, directed by Messrs. Jones and Burns, has steadily progressed. It is expected that these latter reports will soon be issued in pamphlet form. A lack of funds has prevented the officers from carrying out much that was planned for the Chapter, yet with all its drawbacks, more members were added to the Chapter in 1893 than during any other year in its history. On Jan. 1st, thirty-nine Active members were admitted, again in April, twenty-eight Active and four Honorary members were added, and at various times during the year, fifteen Associate members have joined. The ranks of the Active members—limited to one hundred—are nearly full, and it is expected that the first half of this year will find every place taken.

Very respectfully,

WILLARD N. CLUTE.